Wight—Watts.

A wedding of interest in society took place Friday evening at 6 o'clock in Baltimore, when Miss Gladys Mitchell Watts, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Watts, was married to Frank Loney Wight, son of John Hyatt Wight, and stepson of Mrs. Wight, who was Miss Etta Hayes, of this city.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride, on East Preston Street, by Rev. J. Houston Eccleston, rector of Emmanuel Church. The ceremony was witnessed only by the immediate members of the two families, and was followed by a reception, to which a few additional guests were invited. The rooms were simply decorated with smilax and cut flowers. Vases of pink carnations gave an effective color note, and the lights were Physicians everywhere agree that the healthiest heat that can possibly be put in a room is electric heat, because such heat does not interfere with the vitality in the air in circulation in a room. Other burning heaters of all kinds consume so much of the vitality of the air in the room that they are unhealthy, and in many instances absolutely dangerous.

In the offices of the Passenger & Power Co., Seventh and Main Streets, are to be seen electrically operated radiators in operation. Courteous attendants will explain all the details of initial cost and the expense of operation, in addition to the heaters, there are numerous other electrical devices and appliances that go toward making persons more healthy, beautiful or comfortable. All are reasonable in cost, and can be enjoyed by those having electricity in their homes.

In Henor of Miss Barbour.

Miss Mary Ramos entertained delightfully at cards on Friday evening in her home, 119 South First Street, in honor of Miss Edna Barbour, whose engagement to Manly Burrows Ramos, Jr., has just been announced.

The Ramos home was prettily decorated in red, hearts and valentine ideas being used in the decorations, tally cards and appropriate refreshments, while the centrepiece in the dining-room was a large red heart, surrounded by smaller ones, with motioes which served as toasts. Sam Lucy presided as toast-master.

Receiving with Miss Ramos, who wore corn-colored silk, and Miss Barbour in blue crepe de chine, was Miss Vera Ramos, a cousin of the hostess, who wore a handsome princess gown of plak satin.

The prize was won by Miss Katharine Polley, who gracefully presented it to Miss Barbour. After refreshments had been served a surprise was tendered Miss Barbour, being a miscellaneous shower, and many beautiful presents were received.

Later there was music and dancing, which was greatly enjoyed by those who partook of Miss Ramos's hospitality.

Queen of Koin, a neighboring kingdom, and his deception of her by sending the portrait of Hassin, captain of the guard, as his own portrait, give rise to quite a number of complications. A double love story adds to the interest, the queen becoming enamored of Hassin, while Iris, princess of Kong, is woosed by Fezzan, a wealthy noble of Koin. Givum L. Smith, an American and a stranger in Kong, "butts in," and manages to have a hand in nearly everything that goes cen.

All ends happlily before the finale, the two pairs of lovers being brought together with all obstacles to their happiness removed. The King of Kong holds tight to his throne, with the sid of his diminutive Frime Minister Eakkup, and with the singing of the Good Old Song the people of Kong bid their audience adieu.
